HOW TO CAMP THIS SUMMER.

WOULD YOU SAIL, FISH OR HUNT?

Then Read About These Beauty Spots of Nature and How to Get

On the Great South Bay or on Long Island Sound there are numerous camping places where a delighful season can be spent, half on the water and half under the awning of a tent pitched on some sandy beach. Any of these secluded spots can be reached from New York in less than an hour by train. Superb fishing, gunning, sailing, crabbing, and everything else conductve to happiness in hot weather can be found in the waters within fifty miles of New York.

and they will answer all the purposes for a party of three or four. A good sized canvas tent, costing complete about $100, should be obtained and stored away on the boat. With the rest of the camping outfit, such as tius, pots, stove, beds and blankets, the party would be ready for a novel vacation at an initial expense of about $300.

Amityville or Babylon, one hour from New York, is a good starting point, or one can sall from New York on the boat, and pass through Fire Island Inlet or Jones's Inlet to the Bay. Any one familiar with the coast would undertake to sail the craft from New York to any point in the Great South Bay for $5. Camping places are numerous, and it is only a question of choosing the best. On Jone's Beach, nearly opposite Amityville, the tent can be pitched in almost complete solltude. No cottage has yet disfigured the white, sandy surface of this beach, and the birds alone inhabit the place in Summer. There is a life saving station on the island, but in the Summer months it is closed, and the campers are practically monarchs of all they survey. The beach island is not more than a quarter of a mile wide, with the ocean washing the sands on one side, and the Great South Bay rolling upon the opposite. Natural coves on the Bay side form excellent harbors for the boat, where it will be safe during the heaviest Summer The tent can be pitched on the highest point of the ridge, overlooking the ocean and the Bay, where every breeze that blows will reach it. Supplies must be brought from the Long Island villages, which can be reached in a two hours' sail, but if one understands gunning and fishing he should keep the table pretty well Trile supplied with game and fish.

Crabs bount the waters of the whole South Bay in great numbers, and can able of all personality in the state of the whole state South Bay in great numbers, and can be caught with a net or clam rake. Along the grassy banks of the island scallops and soft clams abound, while at low tide all the hard clams can be raked from the mod banks that may be needed for baking and for clam chowders. The baymen are constantly raking for the clams, and if one with-half a little gray, streaky; thanks the hair soft, yout and keeps it in curl. For gentlemen with-half a little gray, streaked gr constantly raking for the clams, and if one an is indisposed to labor for his dinner he gray, and with BALD HEADS, it is specifically proposed all he would form the gray, and with BALD HEADS, it is specifically can purchase all be wants from the clam-

The fishing in the Great South Bay in the about the haunts and methods of the various denizens of the deep may be of practical value to the camper. Along the edge of the deep channels that wind all through the Bay large flounders, or flat fish, hide it the mud, and, with a drop line balted with clams, one can secure a mess in a short time. The line should be fifty feet long, the books a trifle larger than trout books, and the sinker heavy enough to carry the balt to the bottom. The hooks need to be fixed so they will float about one foot from the bottom when the sinker is resting on the mud. Flounders weighing three and four pounds can be caught there in about dance from the middle of March to the mid-

By that time the young bluefish or snappers will begin to appear in the bay in large schools, and then the sport of the season will open. With several troll lines and hooks the most delicious fish that inhabit the waters near New York can be caught. A school of young snappers always attract the fisherman's attention by leaping out of the water and breaking. When they are discovered it is only necessary to sail the boat through the school, and one will be caught on each line. The fun in bauling the gamey fish into the boat after once hooked cannot be described; it must be experienced to be appreciated fully. When the snappers are not biting it is always possible to troll for larger bluefish in the inlets. Old patriarchs of the tribe weighing six to eight pounds haunt the deep, turbulent waters of the inlet, and if one can be induced to take the hook he s will give rare sport to the fisherman, A sail up and down the inlet when the tide is running in is of itself a pleasant experlence, but when a mess of fine blusfish is hooked in the bargain it is something long to be remembered. "Chumming" for blusfish is a favorite sport further east in the Babylon Bay, where large bluefish hide all Summer long. A supply of bony fish of price is obtained from one of the fishing boats to buy, but will be cordially recand ground up into small pieces. With several buckets full of this ground fish in the boat everything is ready for work.

On the north side of Long Island equally fine camping places can be found. At the entrance to Oyster Bay Harbor there are several stretches of the purest white sand, packed so hard that a bicycle can be wheeled smoothly over the surface. At Lloyd's Neck the beach is unoccupied by any cottages or hotels, and deep water comes so close to the edge of the beac that a deep-draught boat can be anchore within twenty feet of the shore. The sailing here is superior to that in the Great South Bay. There is no danger of mud bars and sand banks, but the yachtsman must keep his weather eye open for rocks. Pointed, jagged rocks protrude from the bottom of the Sound all along the const, and at low tide the boat is apt to run into one and plunge a hole into the prow. The only safe way in sailing on he Sound is to keep well out from the shore. Many lines of rocks, both on the Long Island and Connecticut shore extend two and three miles out from the shore, and at Our Doors, two and three miles out from the shore, and a boat is really never safe when sailing in a stiff breeze unless she is kept outside of the spar buoys set all along the Sound for large boats. Anywhere inside of these bucys it is possible to strike a rock with sufficient force to wreck the boat. A chars of the Sound will mark out quite clearly the most prominent rocks, and the channels to the various harbors will be clearly traced on it; but even then it is only proper that a sharp lookout should be kept for rocks in entering any new place. Oyster Bay Harbor is a deep one, and in the Summer season it is crowded with yachts and sailing craft of all kinds. The white sails of the Sound yacht clubs dot the surface of the water every day, and There.

New York.

At this season of the year sail boats are held at pretty stiff prices, as every bayman and boat builder knows that the season is approaching when his craft will be in daily demand; but if one is wise enough to go out of the ordinary routes of travel, he can secure what he wants at a comparatively small cost. In some of the simil villages along the south side of Long Island such as Seeford, Amityville, Bayport, Greenpoint and Massapequa, the South Bay cat boats can be purchased for $150 apiece, and they will answer all the purposes for called ranchorage piace, and the meadows back of it are full of birds, especially right after an easterly storm.

It is pretty hard to give the very best work that can be done in dentistry at a very low cost—that is, it is not quite so satisfactory as getting a big price for it. However, because of MY NEW INVEN-TION I am able to adjust my prices so that anybody can afford to come to me and get the best work of which I am capable without feeling that my charges are exorbitant. I don't wish to imply that I will work for so near nothing that it wont pay me to do it, but I do mean to say, and to make it very plain, that you can get a better grade of work of me than you can of any other dentist in this country, and at a price that will be entirely satisfactory.

Je Get the Best. Je

I have been practising my art of crown and bridge work in dentistry for 16 years at my present address. My experience covers so many years of actual work, and I have been so entirely successful, that I have on my list of patients the very best people in New York and the surrounding cities. They are people who are particular, who want the work well done, and they know when they come to me that they get it well done. They know that my method is so perfect that no one can tell the difference between natural teeth-and the artificial teeth that I make and adjust in the mouths of my patients.

Bridge and Crown Work.

My bridge and crown work is a substitute for bad teeth, and is perfectly natural and as serviceable as natural teeth. You know what crown work is, don't you? It is setting a gold or porcelain front tooth on a natural root in such a manner as to prevent decay of the root and make the tooth as good as a natural tooth in every respect. My Bridge Work is filling an empty space, or an almost empty mouth, with teeth as good as the natural teeth WITHOUT THE USE OF A PLATE IN EITHER UPPER OR LOWER PART OF THE MOUTH. These are the best methods or operations in all dentistry, and are exclusively mine. Of course a thing as good as this has many imitators, but not having been taught by me they are like school boys who are not under proper direction, and they are careless and inefficient. So, if you want the real work done in the right way, come to me.

Call for Estimate.

Call, have an examination made and opinion given. An estimate will be made at the lowest possible cost consistent with good work. This is a fair proposition, and one that everybody can take advantage of with no trouble to themselves except calling at my office. If you can't call, write for my pamphlet, which I will send you without charge. And one word of advice: Don't neglect your teeth: don't conrinue to suffer with them; don't have them extracted; don't put off coming to me when just a I'ttle of your time spent in my operating room will put your teeth in good condition ABSOLUTELY WITHOUT PAIN and without much cost. Remenber that no part of the face has more to do with its beauty than perfect teeth, and if you haven't good teeth, let me supply them.
